THE HUMAN SOUL FOUND.

Scientific Disclosures and Proofs Which Threaten to Startle and Artonish the Whole World When They Are Published.

LIECOLN, NEB., Aug. 27.-A most remarkable discovery has recently causes and effects. Death is but the developed in this city. It is of such an astounding nature that the correspondent hesitates to give the circumstances to the public on account of that is mainly due its ignorance." being barred at present from giving names, although there is no good reason why it should not be done. However, the gentleman who has made the discovery requests it. This disclosure consists in proving beyond the possibility of a doubt by scientific means the existence of the human soul, laying bare the greatest secret of nature and proving the doctrine of eternal faith "that the soul of man doth live," the disclosures and proofs of which will shortly startle and as-stonish the entire world.

For the sake of convenience the gentleman alluded to will be called mild eye and thoughtful countenance a devout Christian, possessing a peculiar belief that the soul of a man is a counterpart of the body itself; and in this theory of the dual man he sought the key of life and death. He reasoned that within this body of bone and sinew was yet another body existing in vapor form which death alone should free, and that by a simple microscopic device the dull sight of human eyes might penetrate the min-ute particles of the air we breath, and see the soul take form and flight to the boundaries of another world.

His attention was first attracted to this, he says, by a man lying upon a sofa suffering with a pain in his foot, and yet there was no foot there to suffer, the leg having been amputated nearly to the hip. "For years," says Mr. Holland, "this incident ran through my mind, until at last I resolved upon an experiment. I pro-cured the most powerful lenses I could find and completed an inven-tion of my own, and when I had my light arranged perfectly so I could examine the microbes of the air, I called upon a friend who had lost his called upon a friend who had lost his arm and explained that I wanted him to put his imaginary hand where I directed. He laughingly accompani-ed me to my rooms and did as I de-sired. The moment I adjusted the glass a world of revelation broke glass a world of revelation broke upon me. The dual hand lay beneath my glass! I asked him to make letters with his imaginary finger. He did so and to his wonder and astonishment I spelled out the sentences he wrote. That was conclusive evidenwrote. That was conclusive eviden-dence to me," continued Mr. Holland,

"and you know the rest."

The second experiment was one of the greatest difficulty—that of watching the soul itself—take—flight. The friends of dying men would not al-low experiments, and, indeed, it would have been a delicate matter to ask it. Hospitals afforded opportunities, but physicians and attendants had no faith in the experiments of the quiet gentleman, whom they no doubt alluded to as "crank," so for nearly a year he was waiting and watching for a man ready to die.

He fell penuliess, and was about to be taken by the authorities to the county poor-house when Mr. Holland interposed and had him removed to his own home, to nurse and watch him die. Through many long hours of the night, Mr. Holland sat by the bedside of his charge, fanning the spark of life lest it should go out in the night, when all efforts at the experiment would be lost, and leaving orders by day with his wife to call him the moment the patient seemed to be sinking.

The fated moment came about 10 o'clock yesterday morning. Stretched upon a low bedside, with the deathrattle sounding in his throat, lay a young man of perhaps twenty-three years of age. Mr. Holland quietly motioned the correspondent to a seat and continued watching the seat and continued watering the features of the dy'ing man with silent interest. Presently he arose and ad-justed the curtains of the windows so that a flood of light fell asiant the dying man. He wheeled from a cor-ner of the room what looked like a photographer's camera, arranged the lenses to a focus, and then produced a large lens of some twelve inches in diameter and placed it in grooves made to fit behind the apparatus. The back part was then covered with a black cloth so as to obscure the light, and from time to time as the breathing of the man grew heavier Mr. Holland made inspections of the instrument. At precisely 11:30 o'clock a sudden tremor passed through the body and he had ceased to breathe. Mr. Hol-land arose from the bedside and said in a whisper:

"Now is the time!" Together Mr. Holland and the cor-respondent passed their bands under the black cloth and bent their eyes intently upon the glass. Particles of dust in the air were magnified several thousand times and for a time their motion kept a perfect dazzle upon the glass.

Then as the vapor gathers into clouds, so an object appeared to be forming a foot above the body upon the bed. Particles seemed to seek particles, as by some molecular attraction, until an object was clearly distinguishable. It seemed the values of the particle of the pory form of a man rapidly assuming a more perfect shape, pure and color-less as the most delicate crystal. There was a moment of awful stillness, and a feeling came over me which I can never describe. We bent our eyes intently upon the glass until, particle by particle, the shape-ly form of a man had formed and lay floating a foot above, and moored to the body by a slender cord of its own formation. The face took the shape of the dead man, but was beautiful in expression; the ever were elected. of the dead man, but was beautiful in casual meeting took place, that has, expression; the eyes were closed, and under the alchemy of restless years, the new-formed being seemed as if

My little daughter all her life has My little daughter all her life has been in delicate health. Her blood seemed to be impoverished. She has taken various preparations of iron, cod-liver oil, and tonics of many kinds, which were prescribed by the best physicians, and while she was benefited, yet it was only temporary. A member of my congregation, who had tried it, recommended S. S. S. For about a year she has had an indolent but stubborn sore behind her gentleman alluded to will be called dolent but stubborn sore behind her Mr. Holland, a man of small stature, a cars. After she had taken Swift's Specific for a short time the sores grew worse and began to discharge. This I regarded as favorable. In a very short time her ears grew better, and to-day are entirely well. Her appetite is splendid and regular, she is full of life and cheerfulness. The change is evident to the most casual observer. I ascribe it all, under the blessings of God, to Swift's Specific. In view of what it has done for me and mine, I can most confidently and sincerely recommend it to all who need such a remedy. Let the suffering give it a fair trial, and it will bring hope, health and happiness into every home.

We have seen him come in town several times, driving a horse that looked like he could hardly go at all, and there were whelks nearly all over him which the driver had made trying to get him along. We suppose, though, it is more the fault of the contractor than of the carrier. If the carrier had good horses he would not have to whip so much.

We don't mean to get up a fight with any one, but it is simply an imposition upon the county and a disgrace to her, to suffer such things.
